International Student Admission

All international undergraduate applicants who will require an F-1 or J-1 visa must demonstrate English proficiency by providing official results from an approved proficiency exam such as the TOEFL, IELTS, Duolingo English Test, ACT, or SAT. Students may review English Proficiency (https://www.ndsu.edu/admission/how_to_apply/international/english_proficiency/) requirements and waiver countries on the Admission website. Contact the Office of International Student & Study Abroad Services (<https://www.ndsu.edu/international/>) if you feel you qualify for an exemption. For full admission procedures, deadlines, and to apply, follow the steps outlined on the International Admission (<https://www.ndsu.edu/international/apply/undergraduate/>) page. Students who have been suspended from other institutions will not be considered for admission to NDSU until the suspension has been lifted by that institution or until one year has elapsed.

For First-Year international undergraduate admission, applicants must meet the following requirements:

- Applicants should have an educational background in the core curriculum of laboratory science, mathematics, social science, and English. A secondary or high school grade point average of at least 2.75 (4.0 scale) or the equivalent in core subjects is recommended.

FOR TRANSFER INTERNATIONAL UNDERGRADUATE ADMISSION, APPLICANTS MUST MEET THE FOLLOWING REQUIREMENTS:

- A student is considered a transfer applicant if they have 24 or more transferable college credits completed at the time of application. A decision will be based on your college academic record including coursework attempted, coursework completed and cumulative GPA from all previously attended post-secondary institutions. A post-secondary/university grade point average (GPA) of 2.0 (4.0 scale) or the equivalent, is recommended.
